and the Global War on Terror. Check out our Throwback Thursday posts on Facebook the second Thursday of each month to learn more about how the initial 134th Fighter Interceptor Group evolved to become the outstanding 134th Air Refueling Wing of today.

In 1957, President Dwight D. Eisenhower was beginning his second term, John H. Glenn broke the intercontinental speed record, Tennessee began desegregation in public schools, and "West Side Story" made its debut on Broadway.

Sixty years ago Knoxville also became home to the 134th Fighter Interceptor Group—now known as the 134th Air Refueling Wing.

The men and women of the 134th have evolved for 60 years - proudly serving the Nation and the State of Tennessee in true Volunteer fashion. Since its inception, Airmen of the 134th have flown five different aircraft, contributed in every American conflict from the Cold War to the Global War on Terror, and assisted Tennesseans during countless natural and man-made disasters.

This summer we begin our celebration as we remember the people, aircraft and missions associated with the 134th. Beginning this month and ending in December, we will highlight six eras the unit has transitioned through as we recall the legacy, contributions and memories from the Cold War, the Berlin Crisis, the Creek Party, Operations Desert Shield/Desert Storm

How Power Production Technicians Help Save Lives

By Staff Sgt. Ben Mellon, 134 Public Affairs

JOINT BASE ELMENDORF-RICHARDSON, Alaska — (July 27, 2017) – The 134th Civil Engineer Squadron's Power Production team is training on aircraft barrier systems during their two-week deployed field training here.

The annual DFT is an opportunity for Airmen to travel to a different location and train on equipment they don't get the chance to train on during the standard two-day drill at the 134th.

“It's really important for us to get this two weeks out here,” said Staff Sgt. William Frosell, an electrical power production technician for the 134th CES. “We are able to not only build camaraderie and get to know our teammates a little better to become a more cohesive unit, but this training we are getting here we can't get anywhere else in the United States Air Force and that is just a great opportunity for us.”

The Mobile Air Craft Arresting System BAK-12 is a barrier system used to stop aircraft in an emergency, which will not allow the pilot to stop. Most of our Air Force fighters are fitted with a hook used to snag a cable that is stretched across the runway and connects to the MAAS. It then uses a braking system to slow down the aircraft.

Staff Sgt. Derek Pittman, a power production journeyman, 134th Air Refueling Wing Civil Engineer Squadron, sand blasts components of the Mobile Aircraft Arresting System BAK-12. The 134th CES deployed to Joint Base Elmendorf-Richardson, AK to supplement deployed personnel and complete annual training requirements, July 25, 2017. (U.S. Air National Guard photos by Staff Sgt. Ben Mellon) permanently on a runway or can be used on a trailer, which allows it to become mobile,” said Master Sgt. Scott Dennis, 134th CES power production NCOIC. “The general purpose of this equipment is to stop fighter planes in the event of a hydraulic emergency, to save the pilot's life and to save the aircraft.”

“The MAAS BAK-12 can be installed

One opportunity is training on the MAAS BAK-12, a piece of equipment not located at the 134th. It is significant because if 134th Airmen were deployed overseas they could be required to work on this life-saving equipment. Traveling to JBER in Alaska is a chance for them to complete the training they need.

“The barrier systems that belong to the Pacific Air Forces must have depot-level maintenance completed every 10 years,” said Dennis. “This changeout process gives us a unique opportunity to train because we don't have this system on our base due to being a heavy aircraft unit. So, to come here to Alaska and get to work on these systems is ideal.”

With such an important mission, the maintenance on this equipment is all done by hand and it is completed in six stages.

“The maintenance is completed somewhat like an assembly line where it goes through stages,” said Dennis. “You take it apart, you clean it up, you sand blast it, Inspect it, you paint it, then you put it all back together. It's really a neat setup.”

The training provided here on cutting edge machines like the MAAS is what allows Tennessee Airmen to continue their legacy of supporting the Air Force mission and bringing Airmen home safe.

SURVIVOR BENEFIT PLAN AND OTHER ESTATE PLANNING INFORMATION

By Tech. Sgt. Chris Ayers, 134 FSS

We buy insurance as a way to cope with major financial risks. We buy it to protect ourselves from the financial hardships of events we can't foresee, like car accidents and house fires. It protects our valuable assets.

Retired pay is a valuable asset. Since it stops when a retiree dies and no one can foresee when that will be, it may be useful to protect it.

Survivor Benefit Plan is a way to do this; it is similar to life insurance. However, SBP premiums and benefits differ from those of most insurance plans.

Similar to life insurance, SBP protects survivors against a loss of financial security upon the death of a retired member. But, SBP does more! It also protects the survivor against the possibility of outliving the benefit. Many insurance plans pay a fixed benefit that may run out years before the survivor dies.

In addition to long life, another unpredictable reason a survivor may outlive the benefits is inflation! SBP protects against this risk through Cost of Living Adjustments (COLAs). Inflation may be the biggest financial uncertainty of all. It erodes the value of fixed incomes, making them worth less and less as time goes by. Few, if any, private insurance plans will fully insure a survivor against inflation.

In fact, no known insurance company has guaranteed to match SBP benefits at equal cost or less. One reason is that SBP premiums have a built-in discount (in the form of the government paying a significant portion of the premiums and all program operating costs), making the Plan a good buy for most people. Another consideration is that SBP premiums reduce the retiree's taxable income and reduce out-of-pocket costs for coverage. SBP benefits are taxed as income to the survivor however the tax rate upon receipt of the annuity will generally be less than the member's current tax rate. Most insurance plans are the reverse; premiums are paid from after-tax income, while survivors are not taxed on the proceeds.

In effect, SBP protects part of the member's retired pay against the risks of:

Early death

The survivor outliving the benefits

Inflation

Still, SBP alone is not a complete estate plan. Other insurance and investments are important in meeting needs outside the scope of SBP. For example, SBP does not have a lump sum benefit that some survivors may need to meet immediate expenses upon a member's death.

On the other hand, insurance and investments without SBP may be less than adequate. Even if they could duplicate SBP, investments may be volatile and rely on a degree of financial expertise many don't have. Consider everything carefully. Don't expect SBP to do it all, but give it full credit for what it does.

Servicemembers Group Life Insurance Program Receives Online Portal

Submitted by Maj. Jaime Blanton, 134 FSS

The Veterans Affairs and Defense departments are introducing to service members who have Service members Group Life Insurance (SOES) an online enrollment system called the SGLI On-line Enrollment System that enables active duty and eligible Reserve and National Guard members to manage their group and family coverage online.

SGLI provides $400,000 in automatic life insurance coverage to service members when they enlist. SGLI members get automatic coverage for dependent children and non-military spouses under the family SGLI program.

SOES availability begins in August. SOES is the online replacement for the paper form SGLI Election and Certificate, SGLV 8286.

The new system eliminates unclear designations and missing or incomplete forms -- problems identified with the paper-based system -- and ensures all insurance holders receive the latest information about changes affecting their coverage.

The system will be available through DMDC's milConnect web application, <https://www.dmdc.osd.mil/milconnect/>. There, service members can review personal, health care and personnel information from one source, the Defense Enrollment Eligibility Reporting System.

For more information about SOES, service members should go to the website using the Internet Explorer browser and a DS-logon or common access card. Click on Life Insurance, SOES -- SGLI Online Enrollment System, under the "Benefits" tab.
