CBD Oil - A yes or no for military members?

by Maj. Jennifer King 134th Air Refueling Wing Medical Group

CBD Oil, or Cannabidiol Oil, is a substance found in marijuana that has recently become quite popular. It is touted as being natural, safe and beneficial for many disease states and conditions, especially anxiety and chronic pain. The products are now readily available over the counter and many proponents of CBD products state that since they do not contain tetrahydrocannabinol, or THC, they will not cause a positive result on a drug test and thus, are safe for use by military members.

This, however, is not true. Over the counter CBD oils are not a regulated product, and as such, are not guaranteed to be free of THC or other contaminants. The strength is also not regulated, which can lead to a much higher dose than anticipated and the associated side effects. Now, I expect that at this point, many readers are internally exclaiming that there are no negative physical side effects of marijuana use. Yet, having treated quite a few cases over the years in the ER, I can personally state that I have seen this to not be true. I have seen cyclical vomiting that is very hard to control, psychosis type reactions and negative effects on blood pressure. These side effects are all with “clean” marijuana. With “dirty” or contaminated marijuana, I have seen much, much worse.

Even more vital to the military member is the understanding that there is no guarantee that the THC component of marijuana that causes positives on drug screens will not be present in CBD oil. Again, these products are not regulated and both the Active Duty Air Force and the National Guard has seen quite a few positive drug tests from CBD oil. Unfortunately for members, since CBD oil is not supposed to contain THC, it cannot be used as a reason for a positive test. As such, it has not protected military members and they are facing administrative actions and discharge. The other type of CBD currently available is in prescription form capsules and these are also not approved medications for the military. As such, even with a prescription, they cannot be taken by military members and will lead to administrative actions.

In closing, while research appears to be promising regarding the benefits of CBD in a multitude of conditions, its long term effects are not yet known. We are not yet sure of the exact way it works in the body to affect these conditions, and thus, are not sure of how it may affect a members’ basic functioning. This is one of the main reasons why it is not an approved substance. The take-away is that you are not authorized as a military member to use marijuana, CBD oil, CBD vape or CBD pills. If you chose to do so, regardless of circumstances, you are risking administrative action and discharge from the military. As always, please feel free to contact myself or any of the other providers or staff at the Medical Group if you have any questions.

SERVICE BEFORE SELF

by Tech. Sgt. Teri Eicher 134th Air Refueling Wing Public Affairs

Tech. Sgt. Robert Branson, a member of the 119th Cyber Operations Squadron, has been Troop Leader for Boy Scout Troop 140, of Farragut, for over two years. He first got involved in the Boy Scouts when his son, Staff Sgt. Kyle Branson of the 134th Command Post, was a member. After a break, Tech. Sgt. Branson was asked to take over the administrative and oversight responsibilities for the troop. The older boys plan excursions and service projects, and the adults help guide and coordinate as necessary.

“I love working with kids,” Branson explained. “Getting to watch them grow and progress keeps me young. The satisfaction of watching them finally get what they are doing and why they are doing it is why I volunteer to help.”

As Branson described, Boy Scouts is not just about collecting patches and going camping. These are a part of the culture of Boy Scouts, where they acquire leadership and survival skills. However, the troop also provides a valuable experience for the boys in the form of monthly service projects. Through these, the troop is active in the community, doing anything from roadside trash cleanup to serving food in local shelters. They often help out at Knoxville Area Rescue Ministries (KARM) or with Knox County, planting trees or any number of projects that help the community.

Recently members of Troop 140 traveled to Florida to help residents after Hurricane Michael destroyed much of the panhandle. The boys left Friday afternoon and traveled by car, working all day Saturday and Sunday morning before returning Sunday night. Branson said it was an eye-opening experience for them.

“They didn’t really know what they were getting into and when we came through and saw the devastation, they couldn’t believe we were still in the United States,” Branson said. “The next day, when we got out to work, they were eager to make a difference. Before, they didn’t really understand what the hurricane could do, but to see it in real life had such an impact on them. Within days of arriving back in Knoxville, they asked when we could go back to help some more.”

Branson concluded that the boys receive many important life lessons from their involvement with Troop 14, and he hopes that they walk away as better people from the experiences they have. He said that the lessons he wants them to take away from their service are:

“To put others first and not be so selfish. To understand that life is hard, and that even though they may think they have it hard there is always someone with less than they have. To be humble, and grateful. That there will always be a need for us to help our fellow man.”

The Boy Scouts of America has recently made changes to their membership policy, increasing their programs to allow for girls to join and participate.

Military Saves Week

Mr. Bill Conner - 13th ARW Airman and Family Readiness Program Manager

February is a great time to give a little extra thought to your family finances, especially how you save money. We're in-between the holidays and tax time, there's a great program in place to help you with a savings plan. Military Saves Week is February 25 through March 2, the article below explains how it can help you reach your financial goals.

Why YOU Should Join the Movement That's Motivating the Military to Save Money

By Alecia Blair, M.S., AFC®, Military Saves

Whether you're brand new to Military Saves Week or a long-time partner or saver, here are three reasons why YOU should join the #MSW19 movement that's motivating the military to save money, reduce debt and build wealth.

1. It's a designated opportunity to hit the pause button on your crazy busy military life and check in on the fitness of your personal savings. Military Saves Week (MSW) is an annual opportunity for installations and organizations to promote good savings behavior and a chance for service members and their families to assess their own saving status. MSW is a worldwide financial readiness celebration focused on saving.

2. It's tried and true. Since 2007, more than 300,000 (and counting) service members and their family members have taken the Military Saves Pledge, a new and improved savings tool to help you create a simple savings plan. Every year, hundreds of installations and organizations from all over the world participate in MSW by hosting events that promote savings and financial readiness.

3. Military Saves is your personal savings coach. When you take the Military Saves Pledge, you'll have access to FREE educational resources on MilitarySaves.org, as well as customized communications, including the option to receive savings-specific text message tips and reminders to help you stay on track with your savings goals.

And, yes, it's all completely FREE. And, no, we'll never try to sell you anything, EVER.

So, join the movement that is motivating the military to save money, reduce debt, and build wealth.

Your future self will thank you.

Military Saves Week is coordinated by Military Saves, an initiative of America Saves. The Week is an annual opportunity for organizations to promote good savings behavior and a chance for service members and their families to assess their savings status.

For more information, check out the program's website at www.militarysaves.org.

Military Saves collaborates with the Department of Defense, defense credit unions, military banks, government agencies, and non-profit organizations to promote savings and debt reduction.

Military Saves encourages:

Love is a four letter word

by Maj. Derrick Wakefield, 134th Air Refueling Wing Chaplaincy

We use the word 'love' to describe our sentiment for a lot of things. We love sports. We love music. We love food. We love our parents. We love our spouses. We love a certain city or state. Love is used to articulate our affection for many things in our lives. However, when we express our love for a person, place or thing, are we conveying the same type of affection for them all? In other words, do we love food in the same way we love our spouse? Of course not! At least, I hope not.

February is a month when many focus on love, whether it is by loving or being loved. However, love is a word that is often used loosely in our society. It would be prudent on our part to define what is actually meant when we confess our love for someone or something, but how should we go about this and what does it look like?

Many have defined love in various ways: Some describe it as an intense feeling of deep affection. Others refer to it as 'a feeling that I've never felt before'. It gives us the warm and fuzzy feeling that causes us to be on an emotional high.

There are various degrees of love and in the Greek language, distinctions are made: There is "brotherly love" that is shared between two friends; There is "romantic love" like that which exist between a husband and wife; Then there is "unconditional love," and I am convinced that all of society craves or desires this type of love and acceptance.

The definition that I believe most accurately describes love is one that was shared with me by a friend: A minimum of emotion and a maximum of evaluation of need. The meeting of that need in the spirit of self-sacrifice by doing what needs to be done, even when you don't feel like it.

In other words, LOVE is a four letter word, and that word is WORK!

We are all looking for love. We may be far from it but we never stop hoping the next opportunity is just over the horizon. We are also all looking for TRUE love. As you can tell from the definitions listed above, there is an emphasis placed on the emotional aspect of love. I would say that love is primarily a choice. It is an act of will that may, at times, have an emotional aspect to it; but we are often required to love even when our emotions are not loving.

The Chaplain's Cup

Many, if not all, enjoy the rewards of love. We enjoy the companionship, romance, acceptance and other benefits that being loved provides. Studies have proven that our overall health is improved by loving and being loved. Couples in a healthy relationship have fewer doctor's visits; less depression and substance abuse; lower blood pressure; less anxiety; better stress management; fewer colds; faster healing; and in general, live longer lives. The rewards are spectacular! However, with love, not only are there rewards but there are also responsibilities.

In order to experience the rewarding relationship we desire, we must put in work. Love requires us to serve the object of our affection as well as make sacrifices. Love is selfless and never demands its own way. Love is patient and kind. Love is not jealous, boastful, proud or rude. It is not irritable and keeps no record of being wronged. Neither does it rejoice about injustice but celebrates whenever truth wins out. Love never gives up, never loses faith, is always hopeful and endures through every circumstance regardless of how we may feel.

All of this is achieved by your own volition. Is it difficult? Yes! Is it challenging? Of course! Is it worth it? Absolutely! Someone once said, "I would rather to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all."

This month, make a decision: Be intentional about showing and sharing your love for another. Commit yourself to the process and love will be returned.

TOP THREE

Look for announcements of the Top Three meeting time for February UTA

A busy year ahead

by Chief Master Sgt. Jana Johnson 134th Medical Group

February is the month that kicks off all of the exciting events we have for the rest of this year. To name a few: the Expeditionary Skills Rodeo; the anticipated return of many 134th ARW deployers; continuing preparations for the UEI in April; unit PT tests; and preparation for the state DOMOP, Shaken Fury, in June. In addition, many units will be accomplishing AFT training at different locations around the world.

Just listing all of that makes me tired! As our leadership has been impressing upon us, we need to ensure that we are taking care of ourselves and are ready for all of the upcoming events. Ensuring we are mission-ready and mission-capable is the key to our Wing's successful mission accomplishment.

Preparing for these future events can contribute a lot of stress to our lives. I encourage everyone to continue to reach out and be good wingmen to your coworkers and friends. The government shutdown has affected some of us, and the holiday spending may be catching up to others. Reach out to your fellow wingman to make sure they are okay, even if you think they are fine. We have many programs and personnel in place to assist our wingmen with any issues they may be facing. No issue is too great or small, and no Airman is beyond help.
